Host Company Description:

This apparel company is based in Manhattan, New York City and has grown from a small operation into a brand focused on modern, everyday clothing. They conduct market research and trend analysis to inform their design concepts, and then their creative team develops original apparel ideas. The company handles merchandising and works with warehousing partners across the U.S. to fulfill and ship orders efficiently. They are involved in product development, combining creativity and technical skill to bring their products to life. In addition, they engage with audiences on social media and emphasize sustainable, ethical sourcing as part of their mission.

Program Description:

- Assist with all aspects of the product design and development process
- Create and update CAD designs, technical sketches, and product illustrations
- Develop and maintain technical packs with accurate product specifications
- Support the design team with sketching, concept development, and design revisions
- Perform sewing and sample construction as needed for product development
- Review garment fittings and prepare detailed fit comments for sample improvements
